BANDITS ROB HOTEL OFFICE.

Secure Thousands of Dollars in Cash and Jewelry.

El Paso, Texas, January 5.—Two masked bandits entered the office of the Angelus Hotel to-day and robbed the safe of about $1,000 in cash and jewelry. The cashier and porter were forced into the basement at the point of revolvers. Thirteen safety boxes were extracted and carried away. The boxes were found later in the basement of the Angelus Theatre, adjoining the hotel. All had been broken open.

The bandits forced the night clerk to deliver the key to the inner door of the safe before driving him into the basement. One man stood guard in the basement while the other opened and looted the safe. The combination was not set.

About twenty-five boxes containing several thousand dollars in cash and diamonds, were left untouched. The hotel cash box yielded $600. One box left behind is said to have contained $6,000 in gold. No arrests have been made.

PREACHER QUIT THE JOB.

California Minister Says He Could Not Live on $100 Salary.

Bakersfield, Cal., Dec. 28.—Rev. A. G. Mills, pastor of the Christian church of this city, found that he could not make ends meet with his salary of $100 a month, so he went to work as a road laborer. Now he has received notice from the church board that his services are no longer required.

"We paid him for all his time and we thought we ought to have it," is the way one of the trustees put it.

Mills, who has a family of three children, says he borrowed money to pay his way here from New York and was trying to earn enough to pay the debt.

BADGER GAME CHARGED.

South Carolina Man and His Wife are Implicated.

Washington papers the past few days have been full of the alleged "badger game" worked on Harry Rosenthal, a merchant of that city, by James Knott, formerly of North, S. C., and his wife of three weeks. Benjamin Knott, a brother, is also held as a witness, as a man by the name of Alton Armstrong. The Knott family is well known in South Carolina and well connected.

The badger game is as old as the hills—the Marquis of Steyne thought he was a victim of it when Edward Crawley unexpectedly walked in on his lordship and Becky Sharp in the third act of the play—but the Knotts seemed to have introduced new features. According to the story as published in the Washington papers, the room to which the Washington merchant was invited by the pretty wife of James Knott was fitted up with brilliant ceiling lights, and when the merchant suggested that the lights should be turned down the charming Mrs. Knott explained that she was very much afraid of the dark, and the explanation sufficed. Later, when the outraged husband made demand for $5,000, the visitor discovered that the lights were the kind used by photographers to make photographs at night and that he and the pretty woman had been caught by the camera, as well as by the husband.

Charge of Blackmail.

The Washington Herald of Friday gives the following account of developments in the case:

"A charge of blackmail was last night lodged against Benjamin Knott, of South Carolina, who was arrested as a United States witness when his brother, James Knott, Alton Armstrong, and Mrs. James Knott were taken in custody for attempting to extract $5,000 from Harry Rosenthal, of the firm of Rosenthal & Levy, after photographs of the merchant and Mrs. Knott alone in an apartment in the Cairo had been made. The quartette will be arraigned in the police court this morning.

Benjamin Knott had declared he knew nothing of the alleged blackmailing scheme and his statements were corroborated by his brother, sister-in-law, and friend, but the witness unwittingly disclosed the hiding place of a letter to detectives yesterday afternoon, with the result that he is now accused of implication in the plot.

What was found in the letter the police will not say, but officials declare that 'new information' shows Benjamin Knott was a member of what has been termed a most daring band of blackmailers who ever operated in the national capital. Benjamin Knott appeared dumfounded when informed that he was no longer a witness, and that the same charge against him was the same charge on which James Knott, Alton Armstrong and Mrs. Knott are being held.

Loves Her Husband.

"Yes, I love my husband, and I think I proved I loved James Knott when I did what I did for him," said the woman in the case at the First precinct station last night.

Behind the cell bars at the First precinct station the four prisoners talked with reporters, telling their version of the crime of which they are accused with as little concern as though discussing a topic of no interest. Mrs. James Knott, formerly Florence Bennett, the bride of three weeks, who was used as instrument by the alleged blackmailers, is the most interesting member of the quartette.

"Leaning back in a chair with hands folded in her lap, the girl gave fragments of her past life and admitted that she is half Indian. 'I am proud of the Indian blood which flows through my veins,' she said. 'My father was a Crow Indian and my mother was a white woman. Some doubt my Indian blood because I don't look like an Indian. Any one who has seen me angry does not doubt it.'

"Mrs. Knott has facial characteristics which, to a student of physiognomy, would denote Indian ancestry, but to the laymen the girl appears to be of English ancestry. Although she has been described as 'pretty,' Mrs. Knott is probably the most beautiful girl who has ever been a prisoner at the First precinct station.

"Her hair is jet black, and contrasts strangely with her black eyes. Her eye brows are black and finely pencilled, straight and similar to the brows of a Japanese. Her nose is thin and straight and her lips are perfect in shape. Her profile is regular. Slight of form and possessing a thin, lythe figure, the girl appears barely more than 16 years old. When arrested she gave her age as 21 years, but she says she gave the age because the records at Rockville show her age as 21 when she was married on November 25.

"Admitting she is but 17, Mrs. Knott laughing declared she knows more of the world than most women three times her age, and she added: 'I haven't been a very nice world to me.'

"Mrs. Knott says she first met Rosenthal about the middle of summer. He appeared to be infatuated with me," she said "and he showed me much attention. Rosenthal did not tell the truth when he said he did not know I was married. When he called to see me at Cairo, I took a picture of my husband from the bureau and showed it to him. We both laughed, but Rosenthal knew I was telling the truth.

"My husband told me what to do, said I must do it, and I did as he told me. That is all. He and Armstrong planned the thing together. When they told me of the scheme I said I thought it would be more successful if the victim was a married man, but they knew Rosenthal's father had money, and they believed the father would deliver the goods."

Woman Not Worried.

"Mrs. Knott showed little evidence of worry. She admitted she had not worried much since her arrest. 'That bed in there,' she said, 'pointing to her cell, 'is very comfortable. In fact, I've slept in beds that were not near so comfortable.' This station house is warm, and, although the food might be a little better, it is nourishing. 'What more could I ask for?'

Talks with Reporters.

"James Knott also talked with reporters, but his view of his incarceration was different from the attitude of his wife. Knott said he came within 'an ace of shooting Rosenthal, and he wished he had.' 'Is it not enough for a man to stand in a closet and peep through a hole in a door at another man with his wife? What more could one ask a husband to tolerate? When I entered the room and pointed those revolvers at Rosenthal I intended to kill him. But he threw his right arm over his face, and I saw he was crippled and incapable of defending himself. That crippled right arm was all that saved Rosenthal's life. I wish I had shot.'

"Rosenthal suffered an injury to his right arm when he was a boy and the member has since been deformed. The right is smaller than the left and the bone of the right arm is crooked.

Declares His Innocence.

"Knott declared he is innocent of wrong doing and also asserted he expects to gain his freedom. 'There are a lot of facts which have not yet come to light, and when they do this thing will look different. I engaged an attorney the day after I discovered Rosenthal was calling to see Mrs. Knott. The prisoner grew excited while talking, and apparently forgot the confession the police say he made shortly after his arrest.'

"When asked if he still cared for the girl, Knott replied: 'No.' 'I wish she would hang,' he asserted, 'and yet—well, anyway, I loved her when I married her. That's enough. I heard of her long before I first met her here in Washington, and I know who she was and all about her and her people and her past life.'

"I have engaged an attorney, and I am going to fight this fight to a finish. My brother, Joseph Knott, who is a merchant in my home town, North, which is about 50 miles south of Columbia, S. C., has been notified of my arrest. He is coming to this city as soon as possible with the money to defend me and my brother, Benjamin. I expect to get out on bond as soon as Joe arrives here."

"Knott says he studied for three years at the University of South Carolina before coming to Washington to study at the Bliss Electrical School. Before entering the university he was a student at a military school at Edgefield, S. C.

"James Knott, Benjamin Knott, Alton Armstrong and Mrs. Knott were photographed yesterday morning at police headquarters."

WHAT PUNISHMENT COULD IT CRIME?

Can of Lye Thrown in Face of Young Lady as She Walked Street With a Brother.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 8.—With her face and shoulders seared and scorched by the contents of a can of lye that was thrown in her face last night, Miss Myrtle Burney lies at her father's home in Oakdale, a suburb, and is probably disfigured for life, while county detectives are searching for a man whose description the young woman gives.

Miss Burney was walking from the Oakdale station to her home Saturday night with a brother when a man appeared from behind a tree and dashed the contents over her. Instinctively she closed her eyes, thus saving her sight. The family is at loss to explain the reason for the attack.

CHURCH WHERE PIPES MAY BE SMOKED.

No Collections and No Urging to Profess Faith, But Booze is Barred.

A church organization for men, at Denver, Col., with no collections of any kind, and where the members may bring their pipes and smoke during the services, is the ideal church society, according to Rev. Henry Foster of St. Mark's Episcopal church, and he is trying to perfect his ideal in Denver and says he is succeeding.

"I tell you there is too much of this hearty welcome on the outside and grafting on the inside, declared Rev. Mr. Foster. 'The ordinary church says 'come in,' and when the man gets in he is locked in and held up. That is the exact reason that so few men go to church, and I believe in getting them interested for their souls' sake; I do not for their money.'

There will be nothing to eat or drink at the meetings of the new society, for Rev. Mr. Foster thinks food is unnecessary at such affairs and he does not countenance strong drink under any circumstances.

The organization was really started in 1909 and its purpose was to interest men who never go to church. The members elected officers and conducted their meetings according to parliamentary laws, but they did not pay in one penny of dues or any other money.

WANTED TO REST IN JAIL.

Joseph Conway Anxious to Spend a Peaceful Christmas.

"My wife won't let me enjoy myself, not even on Christmas day, your Honor, but there'll be peace on earth and mercy sure enough for the two of us if your Honor will oblige a henpecked husband by sending him to jail for the next eighteen months." Thus declared Joseph Conway, of 1,819 Belt avenue, to Justice James W. Lewis, of Baltimore, when arraigned at the Southern police station yesterday morning on the charge of disturbing the peace.

"Say, Squire, your Honor," the man continued, "I'm going to ask you for a Christmas present. The gift I want from you is the jail sentence I asked for. Just do me a favor. Give me a chance to take a rest cure where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest."

Conway stated that he had been married for twenty years, and never knew a peaceful Christmas, and the conclusion at which he arrived was that the only way to obtain such a Yuletide should be to spend it in jail. According to Conway, the only subject that he and his wife, Mrs. Conway, discussed on Ex-President Roosevelt's death was suicide. She said that there was twelve children in the marriage, and that her husband and the children were all well. The magistrate declined the Conway an eighteen-month cure in jail, but held him for further hearing.

HANDLING HEAVY

Locating Three Sections, Crews of the Florence, Jan. 7.—Spevack Atlantic Coast Line Railroad has things coming. I have been told that it comes works both freight and passenger trains in the history of the road and been compelled to run induce number of freight trains on its throughs moving the past six weeks.

The travel, however, for the past twelve days far surpassed expectations, not only in local travel, but through or tourist travel as well in order to accommodate the thousands of tourists who are seeing the warm climate of Florida, Georgia and South Carolina, trains 83, 85 and southbound, have been run in two sections every day for the past twelve or fourteen days, and on several occasions some of these trains have been run in three sections. Last night in addition to the regular two sections to all of the above trains, a special conducted Baltimore and Ohio special train, made up of nine Pullman sleepers, passed through here bound south.

The traffic is so great that the company is short on locomotives and engines, so that when one of the regular passenger men leaves he has to run 89 at night for the south. It has to double back during the night with his engine crew in order to take out one of the early southbound trains leaving before 10 o'clock next morning.

Some of the engineers on the run have made two round trips from Florence to Charleston or vice versa within one day, and then kept within the 16-hour limit law. It takes about three hours on the run of 102 miles to Charleston, hence they can easily make the four runs without getting tied up on the road. That's "railroading some," as the boys of the street would say.
